SIDNEY, Neb. (AP) - Authorities say alcohol is suspected in a crash that sent eight people to the hospital in western Nebraska.

The accident happened early Sunday on a maintenance road near Sidney. The Nebraska State Patrol says eight people were in a pickup, which crashed after it went across a ditch and hit an embankment.

The patrol says no one was wearing a seatbelt.

Four people were taken a hospital in Sidney. There's no word on their condition. Four others were taken to a hospital in Scottsbluff. Reports indicate they were listed in stable condition on Monday.

The accident happened just after 1 a.m. The truck was totaled.
