LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - An online seminar scheduled for next week is aimed at helping people use readily accessible, low-cost technological tools to solve business problems.

It is the first of a new series of live seminars that's titled "Don't Know What I Don't Know."

University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension educator Connie Hancock says the broadband technology available to businesses is expanding so quickly that many people don't know what's available.

The webinar is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. Wednesday at connect.unl.edu/broadband. The live webinar will allow people to ask questions.

The webinars will be archived at broadband.nebraska.gov.
