(Chadron)-The Chadron Public Schools website got an extreme makeover and the new site is up and running. Chadron Middle School Principal Nick Dressel shared the update in his blog on Tuesday. He invites parents and students to check it out at <http://www.chadronschools.org/>. He said CPS tech has been working hard to get the new site up and the school district is very excited about the new look and all of the new features.

In addition to the new, attractive look, many changes have been made to the site to make it more user-friendly. To start, the new site is mobile friendly! Dressel said users will see the mobile site layout if they access the site from their cell phone or mobile device. Users will also notice new, easy to read, buttons for access to school announcements, the campus portal, menus, and calendars. There is a parent drop down menu where links to the handbook, registration, documents and forms can be found.

He said parents can also access individual school information by selecting the 'Schools' drop down menu and choosing the school that they would like to browse. He encourages people take a minute to check out the new and improved site, and the schools hope that people find it user-friendly and informative.
