Heading into the final week of the regular season, the Chadron State College football team remained third in the NCAA Division II Super Region Four rankings, which were released Monday.

Colorado State University-Pueblo (10-0) is in the top spot, while Ashland, also 10-0, are second.

The Eagles, who are 8-2 overall ranked 21st in the most recent American Football Coaches Association Top 25 Poll, are third.

Midwestern State (8-1) is fourth, Indianapolis (8-1) is fifth and West Texas A&M is sixth (8-2).

The top six teams in each of the four regions will advance to the NCAA Division II playoffs at the end of the regular season. The top two ranked teams in each region will receive first round byes, while the third and fourth ranked teams will host an opening round game.

Super Region Four includes teams from the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference, the Lone Star Conference and the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.
